At the federal level, FCC has issued numerous orders to implement the universal service reforms enunciated in the 1996 act. The Universal 4 Service Administrative Company (USAC) administers, on behalf of FCC, the day-to-day operations of federal universal service programs, although FCC retains responsibility for overseeing the operations of the programs and ensuring compliance with its rules. At the state level, public utility commissions generally regulate local telephone rates and rates for intrastate long distance services. Additionally, these commissions implement many universal service programs initiated at the state level. At the federal level, universal service programs target support to high-cost Five Federal areas, schools and libraries, low-income customers, and rural health care Programs Are providers. In addition, another program - Telecommunications Relay Services (TRS) - administered by the National Exchange Carrier Designed to Further Association (NECA) furthers universal service by providing hearing-and Universal Service speech-impaired customers with functional equivalent access to telephone 5 services.
