Here his presence was soon felt in the increased energy of the well-directed efforts of the corps of observers. It was during Mr. Walkers brief sojourn at the National Observatory that he commenced his well-known investigations in regard to the planet Neptune. These he continued while his health permitted, through the remaining years of Ids life, with increasing interest for astronomers. While residing in Philadelphia, Mr. Walker had acquired the wann friendship of Dr. A. D. Bache, Superintendent of the United States Coast Survey, and on retirement from the National Observatory accepted Dr. Baches offer to take charge of the astronomical department of the Survey, for the determination of the...
